Dear Sandy:

Just a note to inquire as to the state of your health. I am a bit concerned about you, for everyone knows that a cold contracted from a secretary can be a very serious malady.

I had quite a pleasant surprise awaiting me yesterday. My promotion had been approved. You see what being gone a day can do? No doubt, if I had been away a week they would have made me manager of the Center.

If you are not kept too busy removing things people don't need, you might help my postman earn his salary. I would be very pleased to hear from you occasionally.

Sincerely,

Margie.
